

St Antony's College Libraries and Archives
Policy on Access during the Covid-19 pandemic

St Antony's College is committed to providing a world-renowned centre for research and teaching in global and regional issues.

During these exceptional times of pandemic, St Antony's College has been working hard to enable research and teaching, whilst protecting the health of students, staff and fellows.

As St Antony's College is a residential College, with students living on site, the following access policy for libraries and archives has been adopted to protect those working and living on site.

Access Policy

Access to St Antony's College libraries and archives will be restricted to current members of Oxford University. This includes academic visitors to University departments and to St Antony's College for the period during which they remain academic visitors, and all Fellows of St Antony's College (including Emeritus Fellows and Visiting Fellows).

It is not sufficient to have a Bodleian reader's card (as the Bodleian issues these to external readers who are not current members of Oxford University) and it is not sufficient to be an alumnus.

For current members of Oxford University, please refer to the webpage of the library or archive for more details on access and bookings.

For external readers who would normally visit our libraries and archives, we offer our apologies that we are not able to offer our normal service. We hope that you will understand the duty of care that St Antony's College has to protect students living on site and we look forward to welcoming you back when it is safer to do so.

During this period of restricted access, external readers should refer to the webpage of the library or archive to find out if remote services may be available to you.

This access policy will be reviewed on a termly basis and in the light of developments relating to the pandemic.
