Born in London, 1 April 1897, son of Hubert Stanley Buchanan de Gaury and Hilda Christine de Gaury. Educated Oxford University, then commissioned Second Lieutenant in the Hampshire Regiment in August 1914. Served in World War One, fought at Gallipoli and the Somme, wounded on four occasions. Awarded MC in 1917. Learned Arabic, gained First Class Interpretership in the British Civil Service, and subsequently seconded to the Army in Iraq in 1923. Political Agent in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq 1936-1939. On friendly terms with King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, and with the Regent of Iraq. Made First Secretary in Tehran until the Iraqi rebellion in 1941, when he joined the Regent and the British Military Expedition in Palestine on its way to Baghdad and negotiated the surrender of the rebels and the end of the rebellion. Subsequently rejoined the Army as Lieutenant Colonel to raise eleven hundred Druzes as a diversionary force for the invasion of Vichy Syria. After the War, joined the Foreign Office, and appointed to the United Kingdom delegation to the first Allied Conference in London. Composed and spoke the Eulogy for the assassinated King Faisal II of Iraq and those killed alongside him. Author of several books, including Arabian Phoenix (1946), Three Kings in Baghdad (1951), Travelling Gent (1972) and Traces of Travel (1983). Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society and honorary member of the Anglo-Arab Association. Died in Brighton, 12 January 1984.
