Biographical history: Bennett, Jean Margaret (1928-2000)

Jean Margaret Bennett, née Reid, was born on the 30th March 1928 in Wandsworth, London, of Scottish parents, George Couper Reid and Mary née Jamieson. Educated at St Michael's School, Wandsworth and the Elliott School, Putney, leaving in 1943 with secretarial qualifications. Brought up in a modern free-thinking family enjoying a lot of freedom as a child both in London with her many siblings, and as an evacuee in rural Surrey. Like many wartime teenagers, she corresponded with overseas servicemen and regularly volunteered at the Canadian Legion Club. Among her first employers were the advertising agency Mather & Crowther (where she worked alongside Ernest Lough) and the Canadian National Railways in Trafalgar Square. She married Arthur Percy Bennett in Fulham in 1952, and they had two daughters, Alison born in 1953 and Fiona in 1962. For many years Jean worked part-time with Arthur supporting his developing career in the wine trade. Volunteering played an important role throughout her life in roles as a school librarian, classroom assistant, Brownie leader, and she was among the first to join the scheme to teach English to Bangladeshi women in their homes. Among family, friends and neighbours she was known for her resourcefulness, good advice and her willingness to lend a hand in times of need. She was active in the local Civic Society and became Secretary to the local Liberal Party. She died in 2000 after a short illness.
